

California Environmental Practice

King & Spalding's Environmental & Toxic Tort group is internationally recognized as one of the largest and most respected practices on the West Coast. With more than 27 environmental attorneys in California, the world's top companies in chemicals, consumer products, energy, infrastructure, manufacturing and transportation turn to our advice for the full range of complex environmental, health and safety issues, including cutting-edge environmental litigation and toxic tort matters. Our lawyers know first-hand how the relevant agencies operate, understand the multitude of regulations, and provide strategic solutions for our client's most sophisticated matters.

WEST COAST ENVIRONMENTAL & TOXIC TORT TEAM

Named in 2019 by Law360 as Environmental Practice Group of the Year for the fourth time, our team includes some of the best environmental lawyers in California, many with more than 30 years of experience as first-chair trial lawyers. We are the only environmental practice with former leaders and staff from EPA, NHTSA and the Justice Department. They leverage their government experience as former U.S. agency leaders, federal and state enforcement attorneys. And our group includes lawyers with technical backgrounds in engineering, chemistry, biology, geology, land use, environmental policy and safety.

Led by Peter Hsiao, former Assistant U.S. Attorney in Los Angeles and lead trial counsel for EPA, and Charles Correll and Fritz Zimmer in San Francisco, the West Coast team is part of our global Environmental & Toxic Tort group comprising one of the world's largest environmental and energy practices with environmental lawyers in Washington D.C., Atlanta, Houston, New York and the European Union. We provide unparalleled depth and breadth with a national and international practice - from the most sensitive internal investigations to the most explosive criminal enforcement matters to intricate permits and regulatory negotiations.
