

Higher Education

Higher education organizations are facing increasingly complicated technological, financial, regulatory and reputational challenges. For these organizations to continue to perform at their best, they need to know there is a skilled and dedicated team of industry leading professionals behind them. King & Spalding has organized a higher education practice group which combines lawyers across the firm's existing practices who work with colleges and universities to effectively and seamlessly support and advise our higher education clients on a wide variety of complex and cutting-edge issues.
