Kristin Roshelli is a partner in King & Spalding’s Houston Healthcare practice. Kristin’s practice focuses exclusively in the healthcare industry. She represents a broad range of prominent healthcare clients including health systems, hospitals, academic medical centers, medical schools, physician groups, ambulatory surgical centers, and clinical laboratories.

Kristin regularly assists clients with mergers and acquisitions, affiliations, general health law questions, and complex corporate governance matters. Kristin advises clients on defending government investigations relating to Medicare and Medicaid billing, appealing alleged overpayments, self-disclosing potential overpayments, and analyzing arrangements under state and federal fraud and abuse authorities, including the Stark physician self-referral and anti-kickback statutes.

Prior to entering the legal field, Kristin served as a nurse in the United States Air Force, worked in the general counsel’s office of a large academic medical center, and practiced as a registered nurse in a medical intensive care unit.
