Kevin Mohr focuses on commercial and investment disputes, with an emphasis on complex cross-border disputes. As a partner in our Trial and Global Disputes practice, Kevin represents domestic and international clients in a wide range of litigation, arbitration and appellate proceedings.

With more than 20 years of experience, Kevin represents clients in an array of business sectors, including renewable energy, oil and gas, and finance, in disputes involving investment treaty protection, concession and joint operating agreements, business tort, intellectual property, corporate governance and many other matters.

Kevin specializes in cross-border disputes presenting unique legal, logistical and cultural challenges and requiring a broad understanding of national and international legal systems. He has represented clients in more than 20 arbitration matters under ICSID, SCC, ICC, and ad hoc arbitration rules, and has been first or second chair at more than a dozen merits hearings. In addition, he frequently represents clients in court proceedings related to international arbitration, as well as in business disputes that span multiple countries, raising complex questions of jurisdiction and applicable law.

In 2013, Kevin was ranked by Legal 500 in Tier 1 for Litigation—International Arbitration.
